

Beth,

I really only have one last question that I believe would bring a lot of your challengers to a better understanding. I have heard you mention that there are false teachers. That's wonderful. I believe the Bible is clear that we are to expose and avoid these people (Eph 5:8-14, Rom 16:17..). I know because of this conversation, you would disagree that you are. And, I assume by your public and financial endorsements, you don't believe Joel, Victoria, Joyce, Christine Cain, Creflo, or several others who seem to stand in direct contradiction with scripture are either. Beth, if you are walking in the light of the Lord, and as a biblical leader for so many years, are there any false teachers, or anti-christs in American evangelism that we should definitely avoid? If not you, or the people you associate with, then who, and why? I ask this graciously, because if I am in error, then I need an example of what really does qualify as someone who tickles the ears of their followers with a fake gospel. Though there are a few other things I would also like to ask, I realize this conversation can't last forever. So, this is the last question I have for you that has deeply burdened me above all else. Unless you have anything I can answer for you, I sincerely appreciate the time you have taken to reach out to me.
